Country background

Egypt, with about 108.6 million people at the start of 2026, is a republic with a directly elected president and a bicameral parliament, and its capital is Cairo.[1,2] President Abdel Fattah el-Sisi was sworn in for a third six-year term in April 2024, and Prime Minister Mostafa Madbouly leads the cabinet.[6,7] Egypt is one of the largest Arab economies, with GDP of about $2.39 trillion on a purchasing power parity basis in 2025.[4] Consumer price inflation was 14.1 percent in 2025 after 28.3 percent in 2024.[17] The total fertility rate fell to 2.41 in 2024, and only about 43 percent of people live in urban areas.[9,10] Deputy Health Minister Amr Kandil said in September 2025 that noncommunicable diseases account for about 80 percent of deaths.[22] The key risk is inflation: the IMF expects it to rise to about 16.7 percent in the second half of 2026, delaying its return to the central bank's target range by about a year.[18,19]

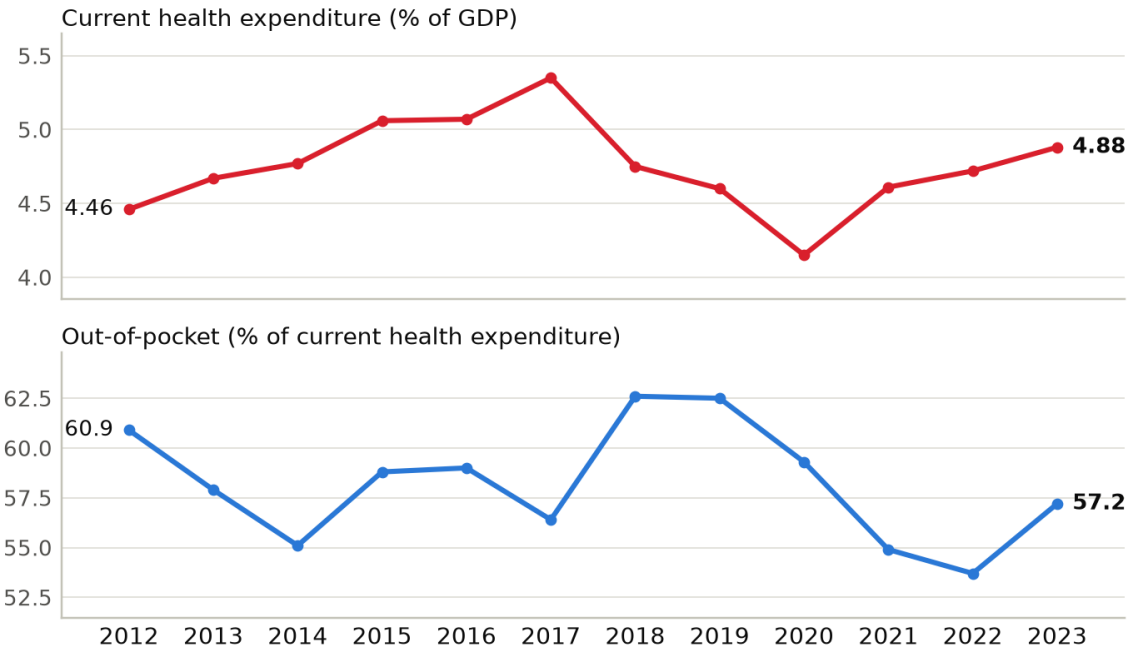

Key takeaways for CSI

- Out-of-pocket payments covered 57 percent of current health spending in 2023, sustaining private demand among those who can pay.[30]
- Second-phase Universal Health Insurance is planned to reach about 13 million people, with investment of more than EGP 115 billion.[28,49]
- Only 38 percent of doctors licensed in Egypt work in the country, according to the Egyptian Medical Syndicate.[44]
- Egypt is seeking a foreign operator for a planned Cairo medical city with 4,000 beds.[21]

Health System

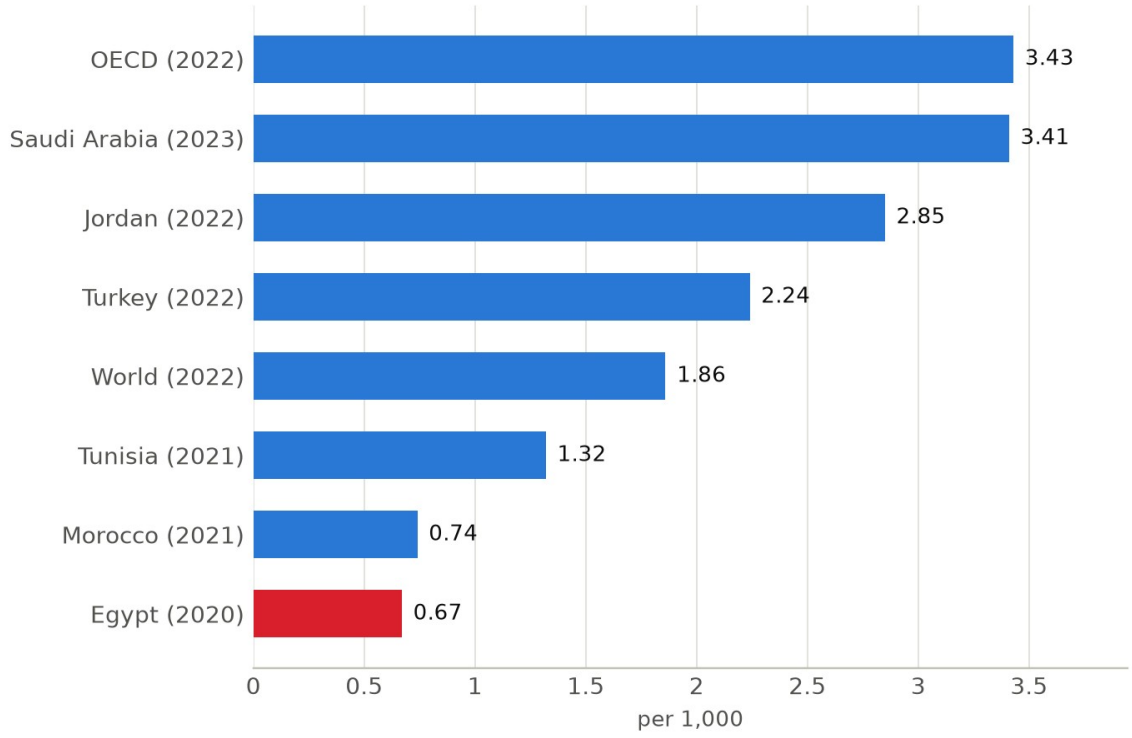

- University hospitals grew from 88 in 2013 to 147 in 2026.[27]
- Phase one of Universal Health Insurance is complete in six governorates; Minya starts phase two with a one-year trial.[16,26,29]
- Government health spending was 1.6 percent of GDP in 2023, below the Constitution's commitment of at least 3 percent.[1,40]
